To whom it may concern

The patient עזר דנית came to my clinic with pain in the left and right elbow joints due to fractures after a fall from the bicycle.

She complained over pain and limited mobility which leads to functional impairment in daily life activities.

The assessment showed limited range of motion in flexion, supination and pronation at the right elbow and weakened muscle function. As well as weakened muscle function on the left side.

After treating with manual therapy mobilizing the different components of the joint and releasing fascia, muscles and tendon tension the mobility improved. In addition the patient got an exercise program for home to further increase mobility and muscle strength and guidelines for daily life activities.

There will be a follow up treatment for further improvement in range of motion and pain reduction.

Sincerely,

Janne Alexandrovitz
